Chapter 1 by Shae

As their mother was leaving, she told her children not to open the door under any circumstances.

“If anyone knocks, don’t answer it,” she told them.

But the boy and his sister didn’t pay attention to their mother’s warning. They thought she was being too careful. They figured they could take care of themselves in any situation.

About an hour after the parents left, the kids heard a “knock, knock, knock” on the front door. They decided to ignore it, but again, they heard “knock, knock, knock”. It happened again and again and it grew louder each time.

Eventually, the girl couldn’t stand it anymore and she told her brother she was going to answer the door. When the boy reminded her of their mother’s warning, the girl just wouldn’t listen.

Again, they heard the “knock, knock, knock” on the door. Finally the sister went downstairs. Her brother lay on the sofa watching TV. He heard his sister’s footsteps walking down the stairs. He heard her asking loudly “Who is it?” on the front door.

Then he heard only silence. He waited a while, but heard nothing. Eventually, he started getting scared. His sister still hadn’t returned. He was afraid to call out to his sister, so he sneaked out the back door and made his way to their neighbor's house.

When he went into their house, his neighbor was watching the local news channel on TV. The news anchor on TV was talking about a murder. Then they showed a reporter live at the scene of the murder.

The neighbor said to the boy, "Hey that looks like your house".

The boy was shaking with fear. "That is my house", he said. "And that's my front door".

"I don't know where my brother is," the girl said with a trace of fear in her voice. "But I honestly don't know if he's okay," the girl said, bursting into tears.

"Can you expand on that last statement?" The soulless and unsympathetic reporter asked.

"Well, my brother is-" The girl stopped. "Um..."

"Yes?"

"He's kind of a baby..."

"Really? How old is he?"

"No, no, not that kind of baby," the girl said quietly. "He's actually older than me. What I meant was...well...he's a bit of a wimp."

"Oh, really?"

"Yeah, I mean," she began to nervously laugh. "He was scared to answer the door." The boy stopped listening to the tv at this point. His face flushed red. Now once he went back home it would be revealed that he ran away, leaving his little sister alone with an intruder. Not only would his parents be upset, but he expected to be bullied in school because of this. This was just

"I need something cooler to happen to me."

"What?!" Said his friend.

"She fought off an intruder with a fire poker. I need to top that in order to redeem myself to my parents and my school. Otherwise, they'll just think I'm a baby."

"Are you nuts?"

The boy started pacing. "We'll set something up. While my sister was defending the house from that intruder, I was out back defending my house from...uh, a biker gang! And I did it with...uh, something cooler than a fire poker?"

"A chainsaw?" Ventured his friend.

"A chainsaw! I fought off a gang of bikers with a chainsaw! That's brilliant!"

The hard part had been done. Now for the easy part: he had to find a gang of evil bikers and fight them with a chainsaw.

That actually proved to be easier than they thought it would be thanks to the wonders of Craigslist.

Chapter 6 by Calebpls

The boy made a post about his situation and how he was looking for actors. His inbox was immediately flooded with responses. Every single one of the 124 messages he received was from an "aspiring actors" looking to make themselves a career. He replied to six of the "actors" telling them what to wear, what to bring, and where to meet. He was ready to totally show up his sister, family.

biker gang name on them, and they would also put packets of fake blood underneath their jackets so it seemed as if they were bleeding.

Jake was going to leave the back door unlocked and the fake gang was to come into his house and start ransacking the entire place. Jake who - at the time - was going to be awake and hear the bikers. He would then go downstairs and call the cops. After the cops were to be called, he was going to run up to them with the chainsaw and the actors would then pop the packets of blood. That was the plan. Now his "Hero" of a sister just needed to stay out of the way.
